Researching your Family History at the Dundas Museum and Archives

Welcome

The Dundas Museum and Archives is home to many sources of family history. If your ancestors settled in the area or lived in Dundas for a time, we may have some information about them.

We are happy to help you with your research.

Where should I start?

The Archives is fortunate to have the Woodhouse Family History Collection and this is the place to start!

T. Roy Woodhouse was a local amateur historian very interested in Dundas history. He compiled information about hundreds of families in Dundas, Ancaster, West Flamborough and Beverly, on cards which are now in the Archives.

We know that Mr Woodhouse got this information from census records, assessment rolls, newspapers, church records, and, whenever possible, through interviews with family members.

Unfortunately, he did not cite his sources as he recorded the information.

Some families have much information about them and others have very little.

The cards are arranged alphabetically and by geographical area. A list of all family names can be found on our website.

What's next?

The Archives has many other sources of family history information. Part of the Reference Collection are the People and Families Files. These files contain information or histories about area families and individuals. They are arranged alphabetically by name and are available in the Reference Room. We also have Published Family Histories. These books are stored in the Reference Library. They include books about the Bertram family, the Mills and Gage families, the Dymont family, the Gartshore family, and the Lennard family.

The Obituaries contain more recent information about Dundas and area residents and is an on-going project. They are arranged alphabetically by family name.
